Feedback on Proposal to Repurpose FL1-109

Pros:

- Proximity - Right next door to the Center for Excellence and “over flow” room (FL1-107)
- Room size is adequate to hold 15 or so students
- Good line of sight
- Only one class currently scheduled in the room
- Comparatively better than FL1-107 (in the current configurations of both rooms) in terms of student experience and academic integrity.
- Physical accessibility from bus/transit to FL1 location.

Cons:

- The technology found in FL1-109 is unique in the following ways
    - Has three mounted cameras, two that focus on the instructor and one on the students.
    - Allows for online students to watch live
    - Allows for immediate recording of current lecture
    - Four monitors, two for the students, two for the instructor
    - Special microphones to pick up what students are contributing in class
- All constituencies have used the room for various needs
- Moving the equipment to transfer all current capabilities to another room is not possible
- No other room on campus has this capability
- To purchase the needed equipment to have the same capability elsewhere is cost prohibitive

Other Comments:

Inquiries about FL1-107 were made. There would need to be blinds purchased and better sound protection. The room would need to be modified as it does not provide good line of sight with all of the computers and monitors. Although larger than FL1-109, there are only a certain number of students who can be proctored tests in one space at the same time due to proctoring requirements.

FLC has needed a DSPS proctoring center for years. Faculty and staff have consistently asked the college for dedicated space for DSPS proctoring, including appealing to the Academic Senate.

With the growing number of students coming to our college, and the increase in the number of students served by DSPS, it was mentioned that a space like FL1-109 seems like a temporary fix because of the room's size. FL1-107 is currently also regularly-used during peak times and supposedly DSPS currently has scheduling priority in this room. For some reason, this FL1-107 is either unavailable on T/Th mornings this semester or staffing changes in availability have shifted.

There were questions about the DSPS T/Th morning hours shifting to Friday when there were no problems last year. The shift to Friday hours will require T/Th students to schedule additional time to take exams outside of their class therefore creating an access and equity problem.

It was suggested that as part of the repurposing of the bookstore space, that dedicated space for DSPS proctoring be considered there as there would be ways to plan the right configuration for a growing college.

Admin has stated that running classes as Prof. Thompson does, with the assistance of a Media Services staff member, is cost prohibitive.

LRCFT has requested the letter that indicates FLC will lose funding if we do not find space that brings DSPS into compliance. We will keep the Senate updated and provide the letter once it is received.
